M.Phil Topic: INDIA’S NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT INITIATIVE AFTER 1998

- Supervisor: Prof. P. Moorthy

Here I have examined India has made significant contribution to disarmament in the United Nations (UN) in terms of ideas, resolutions, amendments and action plan. India is the only nuclear weapon state willing to accept total disarmament within the time framework and the one to provide an unconditional, unqualified and unlimited no-first-use pledge. This study is divided into four sections. The first section, being introduction, gives a brief outline of the study, relating the issues of disarmament and nuclear policy both national and international arenas. The second section concept and history explores various adverse situation and reaction of nuclear disarmament. The third chapter entitled India’s nuclear disarmament initiative after 1998 elaborates with pertinent issues relating to nuclear proliferation with special reference to India. In addition, it focuses on the comprehensive initiatives taken by India for universal nuclear disarmament. The fourth section being a conclusion sums up of the study and summarizes the observations. Based on the study, it suggests twelve important steps to be considered for shaping up India’s nuclear disarmament policy in a better way and for attaining nuclear weapons free world.

Ph.D Topic: SUATAINABILITY OF HUMAN RIGHTS WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO CHILD RIGHTS: A CASE STUDY OF RAG PICKERS IN CUTTACK CITY

➤ Supervisor: Dr. Gyanaranjan Swain

The discourse on rights is evolving with time. The rights of the Rag Pickers as part of the broad rights discourse have assumed significance in contemporary times. My Ph.D research is located within the rights framework. Rag Pickers are those children we can find out them in railway station, municipality areas, bus stand, industries areas, garbage and household areas with having a heavy gunny bags and collected and sorted: plastic, paper, bottles, bones and metals. Different plans outlined by Government Agencies have rolled out government has taken lot of initiative for empowering the childhood. For example, policies like Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan, the free mid-day meal programme and many others have been there for a long time. But the question is if they are successful, then why there is early drop out of students and more significantly, why children belonging to poor sections in urban areas have turned into rag pickers. The central question of this research is whether Government policies are inadequate to respond the needs and requirements of this group of children. Along with this central question, the study also looks at other related questions. Whether the rag pickers belong to marginalized groups? Do these rag pickers constitute a majority of school dropouts? The research revolves round these questions.
